

Specialty Training Certification

At the World Mental Health Organization's Community Health Worker Training Institute, we offer an array of Specialty Certifications designed to help you deepen your expertise and tailor your career path to your personal interests and the specific needs of the communities you serve. After successfully completing the State of Michigan Community Health Worker Certification, students are required to complete at least one specialty training to further enhance their skills and broaden their knowledge.

Our Specialty Certifications cover a wide range of critical areas, giving you the opportunity to specialize in some of the most important and in-demand aspects of community health. Specialties include, but are not limited to:

- Substance Abuse
- Mental Health
- Children's Health
- Weight Loss and Nutrition
- Teen Health
- Suicide Prevention
- Youth Mental Health
- Children's Mental Health
- Social Emotional Learning (SEL)
- Geriatrics
- Maternal Health
- Advocacy
- Healthcare Navigation
- Social Services
- Holistic and Complementary Health
- Community Health Education

In addition to these established specialties, we also offer the flexibility to create custom specialties tailored to the unique needs of your community or organization. Whether your interest lies in working with specific age groups, addressing particular health concerns, or exploring innovative approaches to healthcare, we can design a specialty program that aligns with your goals and the needs of those you serve.

Completing a specialty certification enhances your qualifications and makes you a more valuable asset to your community, empowering you to deliver targeted, effective care and support. Whether you choose to focus on mental health, youth health, advocacy, or community health education, our specialty programs provide you with the tools, resources, and knowledge to make a lasting impact.

By continuing your education with one of our Specialty Certifications, you're positioning yourself as a leader in community health and gaining a competitive edge in the job market. Ready to expand your expertise? Join us at the World Mental Health Organization's

Community Health Worker Training Institute and specialize in the areas that matter most to you and your community!
